Sound Designer | Composer | Transdisciplinary Artist

George Dhauw is a sound designer, composer and transdisciplinary artist based in Brussels, whose practice explores the intersection of sound, fashion, technology, and human experience. Active since 2017, George's work spans theater, digital media, sound installations, and interactive art, with a focus on creating sensory experiences that challenge traditional boundaries of sound design.

Urban Resonance - Phase 1 (december 2024)

Urban Resonance is an interactive sound performance which is inspired by the complex relationship between urban noise, social unrest, and mental resilience. Recent global protests, institutional violence and personal experiences with mental health challenges gave me the idea to create an art project that researches these power structures. The creation of a knitted riot gear uniform is the first phase of the project. Knitting has become a form of activism. It allows for reclaiming a traditionally domestic and often undervalued craft, transforming it into a statement against societal norms and power structures. In the second phase the knitted uniform will be integrated with (bio)sensors that sonify the movements and emotional state of the wearer.
