Transdisciplinary Artist | Sound Designer | Composer |

George Dhauw is a sound designer, composer and transdisciplinary artist based in Brussels, whose practice explores the intersection of sound, fashion and technology. Active since 2017, George's work spans theater, digital media, (sound) installations, and interactive art, with a focus on creating sensory and tactile experiences that challenge traditional boundaries of different artforms.

Urban Resonance is an interactive sound performance which is inspired by the complex relationship between social unrest, and mental resilience. Recent global protests, and personal experiences with mental health challenges gave me the idea to create an art project that researches these power structures. The creation of a knitted riot gear uniform is the first phase of the project. Knitting has become a form of activism. It allows for reclaiming a traditionally domestic and often undervalued craft, transforming it into a statement against societal norms and power structures. In the second phase the knitted uniform will be integrated with (bio)sensors that sonify the movements and emotional state of the wearer.
